About Seminar:

A seminar on Exchange Traded Commodity Derivatives (ETCDs) was conducted to enhance understanding of the structure, functioning, and importance of commodity derivative markets. The session focused on the role of ETCDs in price discovery, risk management, and market transparency. Participants learned how commodities like gold, crude oil, and agricultural products are traded through futures and options on regulated exchanges. The seminar also highlighted the roles of hedgers, speculators, and arbitrageurs, along with the regulatory framework governed by SEBI. Real-world examples and case studies were discussed to illustrate market behavior and trading strategies. Overall, the seminar provided valuable insights into the dynamics of the commodity derivatives market and its significance in the financial system.
