MESSAGE FROM HONOURABLE MADAM CHANCELLOR, VMRF

Dr. ANURADHA GANESAN

HONOURABLE MADAM CHANCELLOR, VMRF

Women's day 2023

I feel extremely happy to celebrate an important day in our calendar the "International Women's Day". We hope awareness created on this platform and others will be a powerful advocate for gender equality and women's empowerment.

History has shown that the most effective way of empowering women is by providing them with access to education and training programs. They are able to develop the knowledge and skills needed to participate more fully in society and to pursue their own goals and aspirations. This can lead to better job opportunities, higher incomes, and greater economic independence.

In addition to this, access to healthcare, legal protections against discrimination and violence, and opportunities for political participation and leadership play an important role.

Year after year we strive to educate, encourage, empower and celebrate women and girls with a hope to have a more equitable world.

We have seen that technology has significantly revolutionised how we live our daily lives. It has transformed the way we communicate, work, and access information. However, not everyone has benefited equally from technological advancements, woman in particular. And this years UN theme, "Digit ALL: Innovation and technology for gender equality," aims to bridge this gap and empower women to take advantage of technology. Technology can help empower women and promote gender equality by providing access to new opportunities, knowledge, and resources

It is crucial to eliminate obstacles and create an environment to enable women to adopt and use technology effectively by providing digital skills training and enabling them with proper resources and infrastructure.

I'm happy that a newsletter is released every year for International Women's day .

I congratulate the faculty of ISR for their good work and appreciate their coordinated efforts to make this programme a grand success.

- WOMEN EMPOWERMENT CELL -

Women Empowerment Cell (WEC) is formulated in our Institution to empower our lady faculty and girl students to help them understand and respond suitably to the issues pertaining to women. It is a cell made more responsive and gender sensitive to women's needs and to eliminate discrimination and all forms of violence against women. A sense of community spirit is created that allows women to face these challenges as a team rather than individually.

The goal of Women's Empowerment is to bring about the advancement, development and empowerment of women. WEC puts efforts to integrate gender equality and women's empowerment into democratic governance, crisis prevention and recovery, and environment and sustainable development. It also encourages women to find practical solutions to their challenges so that each one becomes self-reliant in their own right.

Ever since the inception of the committee, WEC, as a team has been striving to promote awareness among girl students and educate them on gender-specific issues in the areas such as health, legal, career and social

- OBJECTIVES -

- Identification of strong leaders and changed makers and building their capacity.
- To promote a culture of respect and equality for female gender.
- The provision of opportunities and programs for women to be financially, mentally and emotionally empowered so as to promote their growth as individuals in their own right..
- Periodically organize skill development courses for faculty, students and rural woman.
- To inculcate entrepreneurial attitude among young minds.

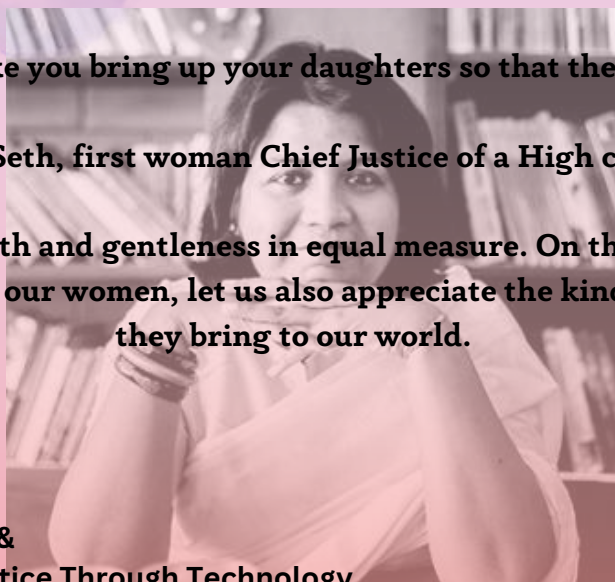

Above all, ensures a secure and progressive learning environment for the girl students.

Bring up your sons like you bring up your daughters so that they learn tenderness."

- Justice Leila Seth, first woman Chief Justice of a High court in India

Our world needs strength and gentleness in equal measure. On this women's day, as we celebrate the strength of our women, let us also appreciate the kindness, gentility and joy they bring to our world.

Dr.Ms. Giri Rengasamy Dean- CSR

I am pleased to give the message for the International Womens Day Globally people have accepted the importance of WOMEN and have also given lot of recognition for their skill and existence. A woman is a strange combination of different things but they are in the right blend... mature in mind child by heart, rude from outside, caring from inside. Certainly the best Personality God has ever produced. I can emphatically say that a woman does not have attitude but she has good standards and boundaries. You will all agree with me if i say "she is one of the most beautiful creations of God. Her multiple roles as wonderful wife, marvelous daughter, adorable sister and a nursing mother are simply amazing which no doubt elevate her to the highest level of mankind. I am leaving the following thoughts for you to think over on this day 8th march 2023

Stay original Stay yourself Let the world copy you" The best outfit for you as a WOMAN is self respect. Don't lose it' The most alluring thing a WOMAN can have is Confidence Develop it'l wish all of you a fruitful year ...Love yourself as one of the best women of VMRF

WOMEN RISING: UNSEEN BARRIERS

A woman in leadership role in the workplace is progressing over the past years, still, the existence of women in leadership across the world continues to be managed by men. This discrepancy between superficial equality and ongoing statistical inequality creates misperception; in spite of positive views of women breaking down barriers to top positions, they are, in fact, still underrepresented in governance and executive leadership roles. Women face many barriers to landing top roles in organizational leadership.

The debate on "Who is more capable as a leader male or female" has been looming for a quite longer period. But things differ in the way both genders approach leadership work. The traits of transformational leadership show that women are natural leaders and can handle stressful situations with ease. Women also have an inherent capability of multi-tasking, which again makes them better leaders, and are often better at socializing with coworkers. Besides, it is more natural to a woman who likes to work as a team player to keep aside personal instances. Women are bold to face any issue esp when it is required in standing up for others. Sometimes I think it's essential to stand up for others first and then over time learn to stand up for ourselves.

A traditional leadership style which includes competitiveness and aggression are highly valued and leadership styles drawn from empathy and compassion are undervalued. When women practice the latter, they are penalized for being 'emotional'. And when they practice the former, they are deemed 'aggressive'. Building an individual and diverse leadership style that works for their organization thus becomes critical for women.

Realizing women's economic empowerment requires transformative change so that prosperity is equitably shared and no one is left behind. The adoption of masculine practices might be a strategy for success, but this is not necessarily the case. Social activities, formal and informal, or happy hours, too often leave professional women out, not because women wouldn't join. In turn, professional women miss opportunities to build the rapport and relationships responsible for career advancement. Organizations should ensure that their policies and structures are equipped to allow for the advancement of their women employees. Relevant policies must be in place to support women joining back after maternity or childcare leave. Organizations should also provide women employees the relevant training and opportunities to participate in strategic projects. This will ensure that these issues are handled systematically.

WOMEN

A Woman is an adult female human. Prior to adulthood, a female human is referred to as a girl (a female child or adolescent). A Woman is a female human being. A female has its origin in Latin and comes from the Latin word "Femella" or "Femina" which of course means "Woman". Womanhood is the period in a human female's life after she has passed through childhood, puberty, and adolescence.

The word 'WOMEN' stands for

W - Willpower

O - Originality

M - Mastery

E - Energetic

N - Noble

Today's woman is leading a life which is catering to various domains starting from family to profession to social arenas and lot more. She performs multiple roles while being in a single body. The woman works for the betterment of others by tying herself in different relationships all her life we have seen women in different forms. The prominent roles are

1. A Daughter
2. A Sister
3. A Friend
4. A Wife
5. A Daughter in Law.
6. A Mother
7. A Professional
8. A Mother in law
9. A Grandmother

Women are the primary caretakers of children and elders in every country of the world. International studies demonstrate that when the economy and political organization of a society change, women take the lead in helping the family adjust to new realities and challenges. A woman gives birth to a child and fulfills all her responsibilities towards that child for the rest of her life. She does not ask for anything in return and fulfills her role with patience and without reasoning. The essence of being a woman, that facilitates the transition of humanity from one level to the other, makes the woman a special being.

The development of any society is measured by the degree of cultural and social development of women and their effective contribution to the cultural construction of society. The role of women in society is a measure of progress and delay in our time. A country that cares about women and makes them participate in all the things and duties in the country is undoubtedly very advanced. Women have proved that they can be full members of society having their own influence on all areas without any condition. So, in order to build a prosperous and developed society, it is necessary to give full respect to women and put them in the right place for the right work. Today, the importance of women in society is beyond any doubt and suspicion. Thus in our society, women play an important role from birth till death.

The New Survival Skill is not Gender Based !!!

Some skills are that which we need to possess to live in this society, however some are considered as survival skills which we do not much think or talk about. While watching survival shows kids are either fascinated by the lighting of fire and crossing wild terrain or disgusted by the gross items eaten. Sometimes I share their feelings while watching these shows.

Recently during this long lockdown, I came upon a startling realization that cooking is a survival skill!!! and why not, being secluded inside home with no access to eateries, servants or family how long could one survive on chips and pickles? The ones who had never entered a kitchen nor thought about the time and energy spent on daily dishes prepared at home, started to look at the stove and the selves with bewilderment. As the cliché goes 'necessity is the mother of invention', and many stepped into the chef mode with many trial and error disaster dishes. Confinement led to realization that a skill has been achieved that will help them in time of need, making them self reliant in a world which changes overnight.

This lack of cooking skill is more apparent in Indian men compared to their western counterpart. This query led towards an avenue which needed some exploration. Culture and tradition seem to play a role in this typical thought that men need not cook. Though we assume to have embraced the modern life style, there is still a clash with the typical roles allotted to the genders. Mothers can never imagine their sons doing any task associated with the kitchen. A boy is supposed to enjoy the fruits of the hours of labor in the kitchen but should not contribute to this labor since he is a boy. The boys are not educated on the hard work their mother puts into making their favorite dishes for every meal. If he does not understand this, how would he realize, appreciate or share the work load with his future family? I have come across many men who proudly say they know to make hot water and Maggie!! WOW!

Are we still clinging on to this mentality that only women need to know cooking and that a kitchen is the space meant only for women? Some of the recent advertisements showing men making coffee or participating in the kitchen activities have given some hope that there is a slow progress in the mindset of the society and that these kinds of ads will create a dialogue for a betterment in the future. All the mothers who still assume that the kitchen domain is not meant for the boys answer this question. Do you want your child to grow up and be dependent on others or be self reliant and feed himself when the need arises?

("Daring the Difference: The 3 L's of Women's Empowerment" By Christine Lagarde, Former Managing Director, International Monetary Fund)

I am a woman, Phenomenally. Phenomenal woman. That's me. Maya Angelou

From the beginning, women have been told to stay quiet and watch silently whatever is happening. But now the time has changed. Today, there's far more uniformity within the experiences women have, from getting an education to pursuing a career and beyond. In this article, I just wanted to mention all 3 Ls of Women empowerment given By Christine Lagarde, Former Managing Director, International Monetary Fund (2011-2019). In her speech, Christine Lagarde highlights the important role played by learning(education), labor, and leadership in empowering women. By learning, we mean education. It is a very old saying that "If you educate a boy, you train a man. If you educate a girl, you train a village". Education breaks all kinds of barriers and uplifts society. Education always shows new doors of opportunity. According to the 2011 census, the male literacy rate in India is 82.14% while the female literacy rate is 65.46%. Many studies have shown that illiterate women have high levels of fertility and mortality, poor nutritional status, low earning potential, and little autonomy within the family. Lack of education also creates a negative impact on women's health and the well-being of their children. And here comes the second L "labor" which represents women's participation in economic activity as a whole. Women constitute half of the world population, though their participation in the world economy is very low. It is not surprising to know that women and girls are the main victims of severe poverty. Everywhere around the globe, we see that women's participation is less than male participation. The World Economic Forum (WEF) reports say that women's global average annual income is only $11,000 in purchasing power parity (PPP), where it is nearly twice $21,000 for men. It's not only at the middle level or lower level, things are worst at the highest corporate level worldwide, where women account for just 24% of senior roles. Very few women are CEOs of famous companies. In 2018, only 1 out of 500 companies were led by a woman. Even when women participate. they are only stuck with informal sector jobs where their work is unseen, unpaid, and unacknowledged. The final L in this chain is "Leadership". In theory, everyone says let women climb up to the highest level of the ladder but the reality is different. The higher we climb. see fewer women. On the contrary, whenever women get a chance to hold a higher rank, they give their best. for example, one study shows that the Fortune 500 firms with the best track record having women in key positions are 18-69 percent more profitable than other firms in their area. We have certainly made a strong step towards our right but this path of going from nobody to somebody demands more effort from each one of us. It is now the right time to create our own world, where even a little girl from any continent, any country, and any race can fulfill her dreams and can be able to create her own identity.

Women Micro Entrepreneurs in Unorganized sector

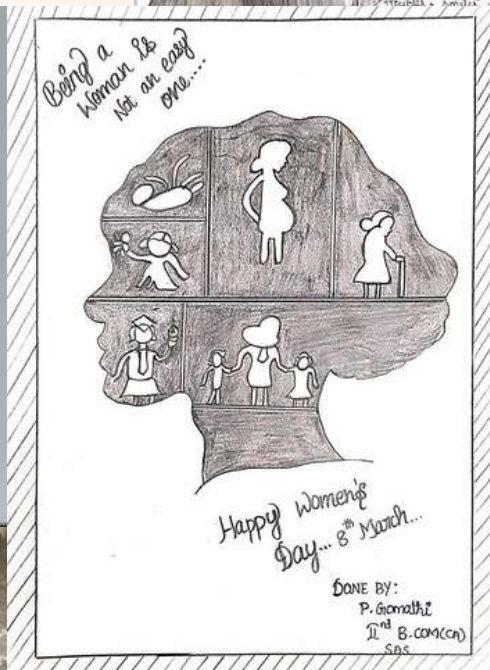

“ Dirt and Toil also makes a women beautiful “

After a very long work day, I was returning home in my college bus. I got down in my usual stopping and my brother came to pick me up .Because of traffic in usual route, we took another shortcut. The saying “Unknown paths always leads to beautiful and undiscovered destinations” was true for us that day. We just witnessed a bright green land, with a tractor parked aside a shed and with many cows resting by. As we drove through enjoying the breeze and the landscape, we happened to see a group of women who were planting crops “Naathu nadrathu “in Tamil is an important event that happens in farming. These women were chitchatting, happily laughing and doing their work with such grace. We stopped by and approached them, we asked for their permission and got into the fields. As I was taking pictures, they were teasing each other to pose for me. Each and every person were so interactive. An elderly person also called me and asked me to do the same work. This was one of my childhood dreams to work in a field at-least once in my lifetime. With no hesitation, I got into the dirt and they taught me how to plant them. Within minutes they had almost completed planting the crops of the entire field. I was the one left out in the first row still doing it one by one. After that, I witnessed this woman whom single-handedly carried crops from one place and gave it to the other women. I was really happy talking to them and picturing some of the wonderful moments that I would never want to lose. One of the best pictures that I cherish for capturing it .

A GIFT TO MY MOM

I Gifted my mother a stethoscope. She is a nurse, she had one old stethoscope. It was a broken one. Every time she connected the stethoscope to her ear, She felt the pain and also she tells me about the stethoscope and her ear pain. During that time I was in my first year of college and I couldn't afford money to buy. I planned one thing do a part-time job and buy a stethoscope and surprise her. In the lockdown period, I worked for a part-time job in parcel service without my family knowing it. From the money that time first earned, I Gifted a Stethoscope to my mother, on her birthday. She was totally surprised and was felt with tears. That day I felt different and had a wonderful happy moment of my life.
